

Osteopath Bill Ferguson carries out some acupuncture treatment for the Wealden Business Group

Osteopath eases the pains of business

TENTERDEN osteopath Bill Ferguson got right to the point with an acupuncture presentation at Wealden Business Group's last meeting.

He gave a demonstration of the medical treatment at the Little Silver Country Hotel in Ashford Road, St Michael's and even eased the aches and pains of two brave volunteers.

One was Tunbridge Wells solicitor Richard Byrt who stepped forward gingerly, explaining how years of half marathons, skiing and karting had resulted in a painful knee.

He said: "Bill's skilful use of acupuncture needles certainly did the trick. I was very grateful because I'm just off for a climbing weekend in the Lake District."

Robertsbridge-based IT specialist Phil Bristow, also found his aching wrist was eased considerably.

"The needle didn't hurt a bit – it certainly works," he said.

The demonstration was part of a regular series of talks and presentations given to the Wealden Business Group.
